Chapter 1 by PuppyLover

Even though everything didn't work out, just know I tried. Even though the whole city was ruined. After a blusterous wind came through. Just know I tried.

How do I begin? It all stared when I walked out of my doorway. It was a weird morning, very orange and smoky. I could only see about five feet in front of me. I looked at the ground. Orange dust covered it. By that time I had just got out of bed, I was bare footed. I stuck my toes into the orange mist. Instantly, a sharp pain swam up my leg.

"Aahh!" I screamed, on accident I awakened my sister who was living with me. I threw my leg in back of me, back into the wooden and glass doorway. After about 15 seconds the pain left me. I looked at my toes there was a orange mark. "What was that stuff out there?"

"Annie! You ok?" My sister Colette came running down the stairs, she paused as she glanced out the see through door. "Whoa, what happened?"

"I don't know." I whimpered. "All I know is it hurts." I suddenly jerked my head up and I heard a scream. I looked out the window to the next door neighbors house. I saw a black figure with a
